

READY FOR THE HORSE SHOW.PAT MEANY at the Water Jump—An Englishman on Coachers.

Stepping from the wet, muddy streets into Madison Square Garden on Saturday afternoon, a delightful change was presented to the eye. The Garden was in holiday dress, preparatory to the opening of the National Horse Show this evening. The great main floor inside the power plant lined the eighth of a mile track during the great waiting matches has been fenced in for the equestrian arena. This immense space is covered with bright, fresh tanbark. In the centre is the water jump, about twenty feet long and twelve feet wide. When bordered with green hurdles it will be a neat imitation of a colored hunting touch from the centre of the vast roof to the bases of the numerous pillars. Nearly 400 stalls and boxes have been erected around the arena, and under the great rows of seats and boxes. They are made of new smoothly planed timber, and are very strongly built and highly trim.

Pat Meany, the best steeplechase rider in America, stood looking at the water jump. He has been brought to go over it in jockey ride during the show.

Money, how do you like it?" inquired a Sun reporter.

"It's enough if they give me a good horse. They don't they may mount themselves."

"But you ride?"

"Yes, and if the horses don't clear it, it won't hurt them, I suppose."

Troyean, a large French coaching stallion, came bounding into the great ring with a neigh of triumph, and bounded high in the air, raising his front off his feet. The horse was a splendid chestnut, with a white nose and a white blaze off his leg and another on his hind leg.

That's the fine horse," remarked an Englishman, who has the care of about a hundred prizes in show, "but he would never get a prize at home."

"Why?"

"Because none but dark bays get the premiums."

Messrs. Hockeck, Cheever, Hollister, and other members of the association, with Superintendents and their assistants, were actively engaged in making suitable preparations for the opening.

The horses had to turn many horses away, said Mr. Hollister, because there was no room to make room for them. Although we can seat 5,000 people, and thousands will be on the floor at the sides of the building, believe me, all the horses will be accommodated by taking by Mr. Cassatt and other gentlemen at $100 each."

Many attractions will be offered during the first day of the show. The programmes offer something new every hour. The most popular will probably be the riding of hunters by ladies, and musicians especially desired. Apply at Cavalry Recruiting Room, 10th and West, New York City, Major D. W. DUMFRIES, First Lieutenant Ninth Cavalry, recruiting officer.
